

A Great Howl.

A great howl has been raised by the irreconcilable Republican organs because the present Administration has seen fit to recognize the loyal South by giving a number of important offices to men who served in the confederate army. In answer to this silly partisan howl, the New York Evening Post, a republican paper of mugwump proclivities says: "It is sufficient answer to the Bourbon howl about Democratic appointments of ex-rebels to office to point to the list of ex-rebels placed in positions of authority by Republican administrations, and most of them by President Grant, including Akerman, of Georgia, as Attorney-General; Key, of Tennessee, as Postmaster-General; Hughes, of Virginia, and Settle, of North Carolina, as Federal Judges; Mosby as consul; Barringer, as a United States Judge in Egypt; Lusk, of North Carolina, Walton and Chandler, Mississippi, and Northrup, of South Carolina, as United States District Attorneys; Orr, of South Carolina, as Minister to Russia; Longstreet, as Surveyor at New Orleans and United States Marshal; Hunt and Morphis, of Mississippi, as United States Marshal, and Speer, of Georgia, as District Attorney and Federal Judge. But the inconsistency of the Republican position will be simply overwhelming if, in a political campaign they invite attention, not only to the fact that they have themselves made such appointments, but that they carried through and deliberately approved the legislation that has made such appointments legal. In a word, Mr. Blaine as a defeated candidate, is a very blind leader."
